Creating a Community

 Target an underdocumented event or group

- Make connections and explain you vision, making very clear what you can do for them
- Be creative this is bigger than collection solicitation. You are offering the full "archival experience" – working with them to tell their story.

BREAKOUT

Seoul, the capital of South Korea, changed hands four times during the first year of the war. On September 15, 1950, the UN offensive began with a massive landing at Inchon followed by the liberation of Seoul on September 29. The landing at Inchon, a daring offensive envisioned by General Douglas MacArthur, included the First Marine Division, the Army's Seventh Infantry Division, and South Korean units. A successful outcome at Inchon allowed allied forces to move in behind the NKPA at the Pusan Perimeter and on toward Seoul. In conjunction with the Inchon landing, UN forces pushed past the Pusan Perimeter, forcing a general North Korean retreat.

On October 1, 1950, South Korean troops crossed the 38th Parallel and entered North Korea on the offensive followed by U.S. forces six days later. As a group of U.S. forces known as X Corps sailed to the east coast of the Korean peninsula, the 8th Army pushed north and captured Pyongyang, the capital of North Korea, on October 19, 1950. South Korean forces began to battle with a new threat, the Chinese People's Liberation Army (also Communist China Forces or CCF), on October 25, but General MacArthur largely dismissed these events as inconsequential until the 8th Army was attacked and forced into retreat by Chinese forces near the end of November.

UNCLE SAM DESIRED OUR PRESENCE: ARKANSANS IN THE KOREAN WAR (2010)

A documentary produced by the Butler Center for Arkansas Studies

Narrated by Steve Stephens DVD released in May 2010 Run time is 60 minutes Available in Widescreen and Standard format

Standard format ISBN: 978-1-935106-30-2 Widescreen format ISBN: 978-1-935106-31-9

When North Korea invaded South Korea in the early morning hours of June 25, 1950, the United States was plunged into an intense and costly war in order to help stem the tide of communism. The ensuing three-year military conflict included twenty-two countries and resulted in the deaths of an estimated 2 to 4 million civilians and military personnel, including 36,940 Americans.

The Korean War is often overlooked between the headlines of World War II and the tragedies of the Vietnam War, and the Arkansans who served have been overlooked with it. Approximately 6,300 Arkansans fought; 461 of those lost their lives. This is their story.

The documentary features photographs, documents, and oral history interviews from "FORGOTTEN: The Arkansas Korean War Project" as well as video footage and photographs from the National Archives and Records Administration.

For dassroom use, there is a corresponding Butler Center lesson plan.

ARKANSAS IN THE FORGOTTEN WAR: THE KOREAN WAR REMEMBERED

As an extension of our successful Korean War project, the Butler Center hosted its first conference on the Korean War on Saturday, May 22. "Arkansas in the Forgotten War: The Korean War Remembered" was a one-day conference that featured five sessions highlighting various aspects of the war.

The keynote speaker was Dr. James I. Matray, Professor of History at California State University, Chico. Dr. Matray's numerous publications on the Korean War include Korea Divided: The 38th Parallel and the Demilitarized Zone and The Reluctant Crusade: American Foreign Policy in Korea, 1941-1950. He is editor of East Asia and the United States: An Encyclopedia of Relations Since 1784, Historical Dictionary of the Korean War, and Korea and the Cold War: Division, Destruction, and Disarmament. Matray is currently working on a book about the Battles of Pork Chop Hill. His presentation at the conference will focus on the hill fighting that characterized the later phases of the war.

In addition to the keynote speaker, Dr. Roger Pauly from the University of Central Arkansas provided a general overview of the war and its historical context. He was followed by Steve Rucker, Director of the Arkansas National
